Extensive opportunities to explore on Haytor Down.

What is there here once people get here, other than just going up to the top of the tor there's quite a lot more to explore isn't there?

Oh yes and lots of people will actually go for a longer walk, they'll come and explore the archaeology and we've got prehistoric through to medieval if you do the walk right across to Houndtor; lots of people just come to watch wildlife, and then you've got the old granite tramway which runs the other side of the rock right through down to Yarnar Wood which is a National Nature Reserve, and that's a lovely walk for people to do, and quite flat, so people with any ability can do that. Lots of people will actually walk up to the quarry and that's a really tranquil spot and on a summer afternoon you'll hear the skylarks singing and its just fantastic and lots of people go in there for a little bit of piece and quiet.
