

John Bellamy

Decline in Salmon.

Certainly talking to Dad when he was a youngster, during the spawning season in the late autumn, between the bridge and where the bathing pool is the water would be alive with spawning salmon, it would be like you see in these films out in Canada with the bears, there'd be salmon everywhere, and sea trout, and then over the years it just declined, declined, declined, and it's a few years since I've been down when the fish are spawning, but when I have seen them they're just few and far between.