What Princetown has to offer.

Princetown has a lot to offer on the tourist side because it is a gateway to the moor, in many ways, it's quite near Plymouth so often people come up and if it's cloudy on the coast a lot of people come, if they're on holiday, to come and see the moor. There's the High Moorland Visitor Centre, an interpretation centre of what goes on around the moor, there is the village itself, people can get the atmosphere of it, there's obviously the prison that they can see, I'm afraid we don't do day trips! But we have an excellent prison museum, which is well worth a visit.

And you enjoy living here?

I love it, I think one of the things different between here and the city is that in the city there's not enough sky, whereas here I can walk out my front door and it's sky all the way.
