

Twin (Hector) Cribbett

Transporting cattle by train.

And the ponies and the cattle and that then used to be sold and then they had a gate part way up through the market which would lead out across the road and another gate right under the railway platform and load the cattle up straight from the market straight across the road into trucks and take them away, sort of thing.