

Margaret Norrish

The wooden partition between the cross passage and shippon.

The passage, as you go in the door, it was only a bit of like tarred, thick tarred paper, was the partition, no wall, proper wall, and she had a big cupboard against that, you didn't see much of it except the little doorway to go down into the shippon.