

Keith McKay

The creation of a new window in the west wall.

Well the window that we see here in the hall with the dressed granite mullions and framing which looks out over the garden area here, we think is, if you like, architectural salvage and we think now that the present window in the west wall originally was located in the east wall where we in fact see evidence for the blocking of that window.