

Freda Wilkinson

Construction of the tallet floor.

The beams above, which held the poles of the tallet floor and you don't see any joists holes in the beams so I think the poles, ash poles from the hedge, were lain across and then they would put a bit of braith on top, that's hedge parings, and then they would put the hay on top of that, and the hay would have been thrown down each time the cows, or the cattle, had to be fed.