

John Thorp

The owl hole.

A lot of old agricultural buildings throughout the south west have such holes and they're generally interpreted as owl holes, that's to say where an owl could get in and out, and an owl of course would keep down vermin and so basically keeping the place clean for you.